The Federation of Labor Unions last night adopted resolutions to the effect that as the mechanics lien law has proven to be a just law, working injury to none, any change in the law would work incalculable injury, and also that the change proposed by the committee of the District of Columbia would destroy the present good effect of the law.

The Bethel Literary Society.

The Hon. James H. Pyles of Ohlo occu pled the platform at the meeting of the Pethel Literary Society last night, his sub-Bethel Literary Society last night, his subject being "The Beauties of the Bible." The essay described in eloquent language the creation as outlined in Genesis, passing in rapid review the Pentateuch, it reforred to the story of Joseph as the most dramatic ever written. No wonder the clergy is the most cloquent of the learned professions. They have the most cloquent subject. He would fine or imprison every dull preacher. The essay was discussed by Rev. George Moore, Jesse Lawson, W. H. Hart, Hon Joseph H. Rainey, Professor Mitchell and others. The committee having in charge the contributions for the poor, reported 250 pounds in 47 bundles, and $6.96 in money, which would be carefully distributed.

In order to continue issuing stock an amendment to the constitution will have to be made, providing for an increase.

A Real Calamity. The retirement of Lord Salisbury and the Conservative government excites little interest in England, the cable states. It is certain that less interest is felt in this country. But if Tharp of $18 F street were to retire the councissor of liquors would be in despair, not know ny where to procure that excellent and celebrated whisky.

School Trustees Brooks, Curtis and Clarke were the only members present to attend the meeting of the school board last night. The recent letter of the Commis-sioners, stripping the board of its powers, was evidently the cause of so little interest being felt on the part of the trustees in the meeting.

MARY ANDERSON'S "ROSALIND." Since Miss Terry's wondrous presenta tion of the part of Beatrice, none of Shakspeare's charming beroines have been so warmly welcomed or so perfectly imperson ated as was Rosalind through every scene of Miss Mary Anderson's performance at Albaugh's last evening. The theatre was filled in every part, many prominent people being among the auditors, and the play was mounted with artistic completeness and was mounted with artistic completeness and beauty rarely equaled. No greater contrast could be conceived than that between Resalind and the parts in which Miss Anderson is familiar to Washington theatregoers. Yet no character that she has ever taken was more charmingly, faithfully and gracefully portrayed. The conception of the character differed widely, and in many of its most winning features, from other presentations which have become famous on the American stage, but no one who witnessed the performance could see how any change would operate otherwise than to mar the perfection and symmetry of the any change would operate otherwise than to mar the perfection and symmetry of the conception of one of the most fascinating characters that dramatists have ever drawn or actress ever personated. Miss Anderson's support was not up to the standard of excellence that might have been expected. Mr. Taylor's Touchstone alone escaped the charge of mediocrity, although Mr. Macklin's Jacques at times displayed power and feeling.

Nearly a Large Fire. The building at No. 1422 Pennsylvania avenue, shortly before 1 p. m. to-day, was discovered to be on fire. Officer Weeden, on entering the attic room of the portion occupied by the family of Mr. W. W. Gould, commission agent, found the bedding ablaze in one corner, while the floor was thichly strewn with matches, in the midst of which were three very small children unconcernedly playing with their toys. The Fire Department soon had the flames under control, and at 1:30 p. m. the fire was all out. Mr. Gould's loss is small, and mostly from water, and the damage to the building, which is owned by the Elliott estate, which District Commissioner Webb controls, will not amount to more than a couple of hundred dollars. In the basement, which is occupied as a carpet cleaning establishment, no damage at all was done. From the density of the excessive amount of smoke, it was at one time feared by those present that the fire would sweep away the adjoining buildings and extend to the Quartermaster-Generals office. on entering the attic room of the portion
